

Brian Moynihan, CEO
Bank of America
100 North Tryon Street
Charlotte, NC 28255

Dear Mr. Moynihan:

With the help of THIS! Is What We Did, a nonprofit organization fighting climate change, we are personally divesting from Bank of America because of the damage your company is doing to the entire planet.

We ended our relationship with Bank of America, and now bank with a climate-friendly financial institution.

Rainforest Action Network has identified Bank of America as the fourth largest (i.e., fourth worst) funder of the fossil fuel projects that are literally destroying the ability of humanity to survive on Earth. The fossil fuel companies could not continue destroying the planet without financing from major climate-bad banks like yours.

I believe that humanity will look back on your decisions as the head of Bank of America and conclude that they are crimes against humanity. We certainly see it that way.

We encourage you to quickly end to your complicity in the suffering and death of so many people in all corners of the planet. Stop financing fossil fuels and become a force for green financing to help us all prepare for what is going to be a very harsh world!

Unless and until you do, we will never do business with Bank of America again and we are encouraging all in our networks to do the same. You can expect many more personal divestments from your company in the future.

Hopefully,
